Yay! Voting is good.

Ah, but did you get a sticker?

I didn't get a sticker. :(They never have any where I vote. This is the sadness.

But I'm hoping for a shiny new president, and if I get that I won't be bitter about the sticker.

Here either. I've been voting for 20 years now, and I have never gotten a sticker. pout

Yes! This year the new president may indeed make up for it. I can think of lots of years where the new president was an added reason for bitterness.

At least they give me a sticker when I give blood.

Hmm...I wonder if there are any Election Day blood drives? "I Gave Blood and Voted"

I heard about one program where they were giving flu shots at the polling sites.

...I think there are probably enough people out there who think politicians are vampires already - they don't need to reinforce the impression. :)

I vote by absentee ballot, but chose to drop it off today rather than mail it in, and I got a sticker; I think it's the second one I've gotten, in mumble years of voting.

Now it's just the waiting.

How long did it take? Took me an hour. Worst I've heard is 2:10. And then there are people who had no lines and were done in five minutes.

I don't remember so many people posting about voting in 2004.

Fifteen minutes, but I timed it carefully.

People were not having fun in '04.
